

Presenting Draft Resolutions

After drafting a resolution, you will have an opportunity to present it to the entire committee. You want to persuade other delegates to vote in favor of your resolution.

When presenting your resolution, you want to highlight your resolution's strengths, specifically its strongest operative clauses. You also want to anticipate any questions the committee might have about your resolution, particularly its most controversial clauses. If you don't answer their questions, they will vote against your resolution.

What are the strongest operative clauses (or groups of clauses) in your draft resolution? Write down their number below (for example, "Clause 1" or "Clauses 2, 3, 4"). Based on these clauses, explain why the committee should vote for your resolution.

Operative Clauses	Why Vote for Your Draft Resolution?

What are the most controversial clauses in your resolution? What questions might the committee ask about these clauses?

Operative Clause Numbers	What Questions Might the Committee Ask?